OCT2017

shibori

Shibori is a traditional Japanese dying technique which has held its appeal for centuries. Indigo is traditionally used but dyes from other sources are now also being used. Shibori is used in contemporary clothing and household items such as pillowcases. Joy Nagaue recently returned from Arimatsu Japan which specializes in the art of Shibori. She will show a 15 minute video and have clothing samples to inspire us as we work on our own hands on projects. Please bring your own needles and scissors.

Aileen's Message

HSEFAG PRESIDENT, AILEEN KANESHIRO

Thank you...

Happy Beginning of the Hectic Season, Ladies!

My one-word description of the October meeting would be “Relaxing.” People could shop the White Elephant Sale in leisure and participate in the make-and-take without feeling rushed. It was great since we could “talk story” as we kept our hands busy.

I found some nice bright yarns for Second Saturday and new spools of thread and old wooden spools—yay! I can’t believe how much thread costs these days. We can add another $137.50 to the Orpha Herrick Memorial Scholarship Fund from the proceeds of the White Elephant Sale. This includes Lorraine Tokuyama’s generous donation of a portion of her trivet make-and-take proceeds. I just love it when we can fund-raise and everybody wins by de-cluttering and finding great bargains! A BIG mahalo goes to Evelyn Nakamura who carted off the unclaimed items. They will go to the Leahi Thrift Shop when it reopens.

Also, thank you to those who contributed paper, pencils, googly eyes, glue, and other items for Second Saturday! Every bit helps to bring expenses down which means more money for the Scholarship Fund.

Who wants to serve on the board in 2018? We need fresh faces and ideas! All positions are up for grabs. As voted on at the last meeting, our Christmas party will be at Assagios at Ala Moana, (pending reservations being made). Your food choices will be announced by Ellen Owens at the November meeting and in the next newsletter. Plan on spending around $30.

Do you know anyone who would make a good presenter in 2018? Please talk to Ellen as we are already starting to pencil people in for next year.

See you at the meeting!
